DEFINICIÓN DE MODALIDAD PRESENCIAL, HÍBRIDO Y EN-LÍNEA

A continuación las definiciones de la modalidad presencial, híbrido y en-línea:

a. Face to Face Courses are courses taught in a traditional classroom environment where the instructor and the students are not separated by geographic space or time. Courses taught face to face have specific meeting time equivalent to four hours a week for 3 credit-hour courses, and one credit-hour lab courses. Although the course is taught in a classroom, a BbE (Blackboard Enterprise) online site is part of each course. Students refer to the course site for the syllabus, posted assignments, grades and other material determined by the faculty to be part of the course.

b. Hybrid Courses have significant reduced classroom seat time, amounting to at least 50% of the course time. In order to compensate for the reduced classroom seat time students should be prepared to do more work online than in a face to face course. The in-class time could be minimal or fairly significant (up to 2 hours per week for a three credit-hours course), but online instruction plays an important role in these courses. Due to the significant amount of material online, the tuition for these courses includes an additional fee.

c. Online courses have all instruction online. These courses do not meet face to face during the academic term. Online courses require significant self-motivation and familiarity with technology. The course MAY require proctored examinations. The tuition for these courses includes an additional fee.

Muchas gracias.
